“ Paul Mccullough was my uncle and my daddy's youngest brother. Out of 8 siblings 5 now have gone on home. Most of witch I have been a part of there funerals. Being a preachers kid I've been part of more funerals then I care to imagine. However they still never get easier. Sure we cry and morn cause we are going to miss there presence and love here on earth And that's the human side of us all. But why we really cry might be the fact that if we don't get ourselves right with god we may never see our love one again in heaven. The Bible tells us to celebrate ones coming home. Where all pain and sadness is gone. Sure I'm going to miss my uncle as so is the rest of our family. But as I close my eyes and can only think that he's sitting right now with his brother gene and sisters that have already gone home and there taking him to see his mom and pop for a family reunion. One that we all one day will be apart of as long as we get our hearts right with god.

I love you uncle Paul and will always cherish the memories I had as a kid growing up.

P.S.—

Thanks for letting me drive your Jeep in the woods that my daddy didn't know about

And if you could tell my other pawpaw I said hello and I love him
